IT WAS A REMOVAL.

THE HERALD no longer has any fight with Governor Murray. The quarrel ended the moment the gentleman was out of office, and the hatchet was then and there buried. We do not propose to dig up the weapon. Among his well-wishers Gov. Murray can find none more sincere and more desirous for his good than this same journal which never experienced and never expressed any admiration for him as Governor.

At the same time, while THE HERALD has nothing to do with Gov. Murray, it does not propose that his false friends and sycophantic admirers shall pose him as a martyr to the disparagement of the people of Utah, nor that they shall elevate him to the pedestal of fame in the manner of his getting out of office. The effort is put forth to give him credit for voluntarily retiring, whereas he was removed, emphatically and unequivocally. He was kicked out as much as was Chief Justice McKean a few years ago, and for cause. McKean used his power on the bench to override law and perpetrate gross outrages upon citizens and the community; he was permitted to run along in his abuse of authority, until feeling absolutely secure in his position and in the approval of the President, he went stark mad in his excesses, and was bounced bodily and furiously. The suddenness with which he was picked up in his wild career of judicial excesses, threw the old man into his grave. Some undertook to say that McKean was not removed for cause, just as some are claiming now in regard to General Murray. The last named was removed, and for cause. Our Washington special of Thursday morning made this fact plain, and also explained the nature of the cause. The Governor's course during the late session of the Legislature was violently revolutionary, and the closing act of his career as a branch of the law-making power of the Territory, the veto of the general appropriation bill, was directly in the interest of anarchy. It was Judge McKean's order committing Brigham Young to prison for refusing to pay alimony to a woman which the court held was not his wife, which brought the Chief Justice to destruction, and it was Governor Murray's veto of the appropriation bill and thus depriving the government of the means of maintaining itself which rebounded and dislocated the official neck of the Executive. Whatever credit there is due to an official who resigns cannot be claimed by the late Governor. There is no virtue in writing "resignations" which are hidden in the inner pockets of friends, and kept secret from the appointing power and the public until the incumbents are removed. If such resignations could be utilized, no man would suffer the annoyance and chagrin of removal, for his commission and resignation would bear the same date, the latter to be used to prevent the form being taken away by force.

The facts are, that the removal of Gov. Murray is a vindication in the eyes of the Federal administration, of the course of the people of Utah as represented by the late Legislature, and an unmistakable rebuke of the opposition to that course. People will think more of the Ex-Governor if he and his friends accept the situation as it is, instead of trying to take credit and virtue when none can be found.

THE SUCCESSOR.

Of course we cannot tell who will be made Governor of Utah. There is more than one bidder for the place. Col. S. A. Merritt, of this city, has been more frequently mentioned in connection with the office. He is known to be a candidate, and he has good advocates here and influential backers in Washington. The majority class of the people of the Territory can have no voice in the matter of selecting their Executive; they expect none and will therefore make no effort to be heard as to their choice—it being admitted and accepted by them that their request in the premises would be without avail. We believe that Col. Merritt would be as acceptable to the masses of the people, both Mormon and Gentile, as any local man who stands any chance of getting the place. THE HERALD, a year ago, urged the appointment of Col. Merritt, and has since received many assurances that his nomination would be satisfactory to many influential men of both classes in the community. The Colonel is an old citizen of the Territory, is thoroughly familiar with the people, and understands the wants and necessities of Utah; he is not a radical, and it is not believed he stands in fear of the rule or ruin clique which dominates and subordinates so many of the Federal officials, reducing them to the condition of slaves to irresponsible and reckless masters. The gentleman can afford to be independent and free, and his long residence here and nothing of the rocks upon which so many have been wrecked, it is thought would enable him to successfully maintain his liberty, and avoid the shoals upon which his predecessors have gone to their ruin. Of the local men who have been thought to stand in the line of the Presidential lightning, Col. Merritt is and has been the choice of THE HERALD.

The experience of the Territory, however, with the present administration is not encouraging to the hope that a citizen of Utah will be made Governor. But one officer in the gift of the President has been given to a Utah man, and in that case the nominee fills the bill of a bona fide resident only by a stretch of the real facts. We fear the governorship, like the offices of register, receiver, associate justice, and surveyor-general, the only places filled by President Cleveland, will be conferred upon somebody from abroad, whose only object in coming here is the salary. A very few days will solve the conundrum and put the matter at rest.

Whoever the appointee may be, he should look carefully over the situation, and take warning from the past. We interpret the removal of Governor Murray as a notice to his successor that the administration has at last concluded that the people of Utah have rights which the Federal Government will respect; to mean that the Territory will not be turned over to a handful of reckless, irresponsible adventurers, holding Federal commissions and backed by the Federal Government, to be depolled and plundered; to mean that the community and the individuals of which it is composed must be protected in their persons, property and rights as a commonwealth and as private citizens. If Murray's successor shall prove wise, he will accept the removal of his predecessor as notice that he must be Governor of the people, and not of a faction merely, if he would retain the office and receive the commendation and support of the administration.

HORRIBLE.

There is a horrible suggestion in the stories told as to the probable cause for the disaster to the Cunard steamer Oregon, which went down in New York lower bay three or four days ago. It was at first given out that the vessel had been run into by a schooner, but as no schooner was seen by any of the crew or passengers, as no schooner is missing, and as the holes in the steamer are not such as would naturally be made by a collision, the schooner theory could not be accepted. In casting about for an explanation, the newspapers and some of the passengers have hit upon the supposition that an infernal machine caused the mischief, the idea being that the dynamites are guilty of the deed. The Oregon is an English line, hence the dynamite theory is suggested readily, as it is in perfect accord with the threats and the efforts of the scoundrels who are making war on mankind by taking life and destroying property indiscriminately with the vain hope that such ferocity will aid in solving a social problem in favor of the scoundrels, the whelps and loafers of society. It is hoped that the disaster will be satisfactorily accounted for in another way than that hinted at, for it should be shown that the dynamites had actually been guilty of destroying the ship and endangering the lives of the hundreds of men, women and children aboard, the great industry of ocean travel would suffer a serious set-back, and the civilized world be set to trembling. The men who could deliberately plan and undertake to blow up the House of Parliament, crowded with the ablest and best men and women of Great Britain, and with people absolutely innocent of offense against the Socialists, could also blow up a steamship in mid-ocean, sinking it and its living freight to the bottom. Had the accident to the Oregon occurred an hour or two earlier, or at another place, all on board would have been drowned.

COST OF A STRIKE.

The average strike of workmen is foolish, but that on the railroads south and west of St. Louis was criminally so. An employee in the car shops of the Texas & Pacific road at Marshall, Texas, was discharged, whereupon a strike was inaugurated, involving the loss of work by ten thousand men, the stopping of operations on five thousand miles of railway and the suppression of traffic in four States affecting more than four millions of people. The criminality of the strike is intensified when it is stated that the Texas & Pacific is in custody of the United States court, and in no manner under the control of the Gould companies, on which the strike occurred. The men could have better afforded to give the discharged man a cool hundred thousand dollars, than gone out on a strike, while the railroad companies and the people of the States could have saved money by making the present a million or two if that would have prevented the strike. When one sees such foolish proceedings as these by employees he almost loses sympathy for the mad workmen who permit themselves to be led about in this manner to their own detriment and destruction. People forget the justice of the cause when considering the insanity of the methods employed. One of these days the intelligent and sane men of the country will have to step in to protect workmen and employers from themselves and from each other, by compelling the submission of all disputes to arbitration, and the making of it a crime to violate the decree of the arbitrators. Had somebody with authority to speak, said whether or not the discharge of the Marshall car-builder was justifiable and proper, and with power to enforce his decree, millions of dollars, directly and indirectly, would have been saved to the railroads, the workmen and the people of the several States affected by the strike; and if it had been held that the man's discharge was improper his retention for the remainder of his life would have cost less than was expended for telegraph tolls during one day of the strike.

NOT CREDITABLE.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean relates one instance which should put America to the blush. It is that:

An American missionary, who had been stationed on the sea-coast of China, went to an interior point last year to establish a new mission. Not long ago his brother, a Chicago business man, received a letter from him saying: "If I had been a heathen Chinese in Christian America I should not probably be alive to-day, for we have been the victims of an infuriated mob. A lot of ignorant carter conceived a violent prejudice against the 'Melican' men, and raided us with all the venom of hoodlums and sand-lotters. But the government authorities came promptly to our defense, protected our persons and property, making good at once our losses, which, fortunately, were slight."

In this country the Chinese are left to protect themselves against mobs and violence, and when they are unable to do this and become victims of abuses and outrages, if they obtain redress it is not by the prompt action of the government, but through the slow process of diplomatic correspondence between the two nations. The American government dare not even manifest a disposition to be fair and just in its treatment of the abused Chinese, lest some wide-mouthed, brawling demagogue should excite the rabble to vote against the administration party. America is the greater and more highly civilized nation, but its sense of justice is less keen than that of China, and we could learn much from the heathens in the matter of true civilization.
